

COMEDIENNE AND ACTRESS JANEANE GAROFALO TALKS TO OUT IMPACT ABOUT HER GAY FANBASE AND THE ADVANCES MADE IN GAY RIGHTS IN THE PAST DECADE

April 23, 2008 (New York, NY)--Prior to her sold-out stand-up performance in New York's Greenwich Village, comedienne/actress/activist Janeane Garofalo sat down with Bambi Weavil and Shannon Smith of Out Impact, the online gay magazine, for a candid and in-depth interview.

Garofalo, never one not to speak her mind, discussed what she's been up to, why she thinks she appeals to gays and hate crime legislation. The article, which can be read at <http://www.outimpact.com/activism/janeane-garofalo-her-gay-fan-base-advancement-in-gay-rights-and-activism/>, provides insight that Garofalo's fans won't want to miss:

Her involvement with the hit TV series 24 and how she learned about their controversial ties to the Bush administration's torture policy

The strong support she receives from the gay community and her theory for their support, as well as her opinion on how far the gay community has progressed with hate crime legislation since Matthew Shepard's brutal murder almost 10 years ago

Her fight against apathy in America, the controversy surrounding transgendered Thomas Beatie who has received worldwide attention for being pregnant and legally male, and who she considers the biggest bullies of all time and much more.

About Out Impact

Out Impact was established in May 2007 and is growing to become a leading gay omnimedia company for both gay men and women with a strong focus on making a positive impact within the gay community. Out Impact reminds everyone to support nonprofit causes in their daily lives and to make their own impact.

Out Impact regularly features entertainment interviews and stories with upcoming and current entertainers of all genres, people who are making a difference, and much more. It also creates national events which partially benefit various non-profits emphasizing having a good time for a good cause.

It attracts a hip audience of gay and gay-friendly men and women, driven to make a positive difference, to always give back, to live life to the fullest and to have fun. In December 2007, Out Impact launched its "Empower All People" AIDS Awareness Campaign. For more information on Out Impact and "Empower All People," go to <http://www.outimpact.com>.
